Carleton Introduces New Bachelor of Media Production and Design

With Carleton University’s new Bachelor of Media Production and Design, you can be an innovative storyteller in the 21st century. Students will design and tell non-fiction stories that engage, inform, entertain and ultimately contribute to a broader and deeper understanding of how we connect with each other to build stronger societies.

A combination of intensive hands-on workshops and lecture courses will give students a strong foundation in data, research, writing, and narrative abilities across media formats (text, photography, video) as well as design and production skills. In addition to acquiring editorial and technical skills, students have the opportunity to develop the theoretical knowledge and understanding of the power of “story” through coursework in ethics, law, civic institutions and citizen interactions via policy, data, and information technology theory and the history of persuasive narration and imagery. The BMPD is housed in Carleton’s School of Journalism and Communication (SJC) and some courses will be taught by the School of Information Technology (SIT).

Visit carleton.ca/sjc/mediaproduction to learn more about this innovative program.

Carleton Completing Construction on New Health Sciences Building

To accommodate the new Health Science program and the Neuroscience program, and to take advantage of and support the synergies that exist between these two programs, Carleton University has constructed a new academic Health Sciences building for these two programs.

The design and layout of the labs, offices and workspaces are such to help encourage and facilitate collaborative interaction between faculty and students. Move-in date is scheduled for Fall 2017, with an official opening expected in early 2018.

If students apply through OUAC, does it matter how they rank their choice of universities?

The order in which students indicate their choices is only important if they are applying for more than one program at Carleton, in which case the highest ranked program at Carleton will be considered first.

All program choices on the application will be considered. If they qualify for their first choice, they will receive an offer of admission for that program. With that offer, they will also receive information on the “eligibility” status of their other program choices. If they are eligible for another choice, they can ask to be assessed for admission to that program. However, the “eligible” status is only valid for a limited time. If a program becomes full, students will not receive an offer for admission, even if they were previously eligible. Therefore, we encourage students to rank their choices carefully.

We always try to offer admission to the first choice before offering an alternative program. For some limited enrolment programs with portfolios, this can mean an alternative offer will be delayed. For example, if students have applied to architecture, we will wait until the architecture school has made their decision before offering another eligible choice.

Do students have to declare a major when they apply?

Some programs require that students declare a major at the time they apply, while others allow them to decide at the end of their first year. For more information, contact Carleton’s Undergraduate Recruitment Office.

Can a student receive an alternative offer?

Students who do not qualify for their first choice of program will have their application assessed for an alternative offer.

Are the averages listed in eINFO and Carleton’s viewbook the same as the required averages needed for next fall?

The averages that appear in both publications reflect the averages that have been used in the past. The averages are subject to change after applications have been received.

AJ finds establishing a routine makes it easier to tackle the demands of being a student-athlete. As the Academic Support Leader for his team, Bachelor of Commerce, Marketing student, he knows the importance of balancing academic and athletic commitments.

Excelling on and off the field

Bachelor of Commerce, Marketing student AJ Thompson is a third-year member of the Carleton University Ravens Men’s Football team. As the Academic Support Leader for his team, AJ finds establishing a routine makes it easier to tackle the demands of being a student-athlete. The Lynden, Ontario native feels he is able to excel off the field because of the excellent support he receives from the Sprott School of Business and Carleton community.

“Choosing Carleton and the Ravens because I loved the feeling that I experienced on my first visit to the university. The campus felt like home and I decided it was where I wanted to carry out the next chapter of my life...”
